Executive Proclamation

Office Of The Governor

WHEREAS, July 1, 1987, marked the twentieth anniversary of Theodore C. Englund's service to the state of South Dakota; and,

WHEREAS, Like any truly conscientious accountant, Ted started his employment with the state of South Dakota on July 1 to coincide with the beginning of the fiscal year; and,

WHEREAS, The state's books have been and continue to be balanced during Theo's reign of terror as Chief Accountant for the Bureau of Finance and Management; and,

WHEREAS, Ted's work on the new accounting system will provide for the development of the first statewide financial statement in South Dakota's history; and,

WHEREAS, Teddy's colleagues are astonished that he has maintained gainful employment despite his harassment of the secretaries, horrible jokes/puns, extended coffee breaks, and generally off-beat theories on life and the human condition; and,

WHEREAS, Ted must maintain gainful employment in order to support his habit of acquiring cars and other toys, not only for himself but for the rest of his family; and,

WHEREAS, The citizens of the state of South Dakota extend their appreciation to Ted for his outstanding work and his loyal and faithful service to the state without complaining about the smoking policy; and,

WHEREAS, The citizens of the state of South Dakota join Ted's wife Alice and his children, Lisa and Derek, in making public their appreciation of ted as an employee, a person and as generally one heck of a guy:

NOW, THEREFORE, I, GEORGE S. MICKELSON, Governor of the State of South Dakota, do hereby proclaim July 1, 1987, as
